

Backend Basics

Backend development focuses on server-side operations, managing data, and handling requests from the client. This chapter introduces server scripting languages, such as PHP and Node.js, which process requests, interact with databases, and return the appropriate data to the user. We discuss server concepts and basic backend functions that support web applications.